SATURDAY, MAY 21, 1881.

NEWS OF THE MORNING.

Almost open war in Ireland.

Grant's letter is looked upon as an unfortunate mistake.

Parnell and eighteen followers left the House on the second reading of the Land Bill.

Thirteen miners were killed by a cave in the shaft of the Golden Terra mine at Deadwood yesterday.

It is almost impossible to glean reliable information from the Eastern dispatches, as to the true status of the Conkling matter.

Large crowds collected at 1 o'clock yesterday at the store at Mulberry and Flecker streets, New York, to obtain copies of the revised New Testament. The books were delivered in packages to customers who had ordered them in advance.

Garfield has been urged by indiscreet friends to make public Gen. Grant's letter to himself, but declines on the ground that the correspondence is private and that the President of the United States ought not to enter into such controversy in the public prints.

An attempt to wreck the north bound train from Arizona and the East was made yesterday morning near Los Angeles river by setting a conking pin between the rails. The engine left the track and rolled down the embankment, but the train stuck to the rails and left for San Francisco at 9 p. m.

The Steamer State of California has arrived in San Francisco. She broke her main shaft on Sunday off Cape Blanco, but continued under sail until she passed Cape Mendocino, where she was met and taken in tow by the U. S. lighthouse steamer Manzanita. Off Duxbury reef the tug Monarch relieved the Manzanita.

A Mountain of Marble.

The Winnemucca Silver State says it is reported that the marble mountain down in Table Mountain district has been located, and that the quality of the marble is not excelled in the United States. It is said to be worth eight dollars per cubic foot in San Francisco. If such is the fact, the quarries will be worth as much as a rich silver mine, as the supply is inexhaustible. Old prospectors have known of the existence of this marble mountain for years, but as they were looking for silver mines, they did not consider it of sufficient value to bother with it.

Slow Boat.

The San Francisco Stock Report shows how they do it:

In retaliation for the reduction of fare from San Francisco to San Rafael by the Railroad Commissioners, the company has withdrawn the steamer San Rafael and substituted the Contra Costa. The latter is a much less expensive boat to run, but is also much slower, and though the public gain 25 cents on the fare, they lose much valuable time on the trip across the bay.

The Post adds this:

The North Pacific Coast Railroad Company has accepted the decision of the Railroad Commissioners, and will charge only 25 cents, instead of 50 cents, on the San Rafael ferry, but as the steamer San Rafael is a costly one to run, and would not earn expenses at 25 cents, she will be withdrawn and the old Contra Costa substituted. Thus, what is saved to the public in coin is offset by a lack of speed and convenience. Railroads and steamboats must be run upon business principles or not at all. If the public want cheap fares they must expect a slower and less commodious way of traveling.

The first stages of the regular annual uneasiness lest the Bay State should have to endure Ben Butler in the gubernatorial chair, is beginning to affect Massachusetts politicians. For two campaigns the doughty old statesman gave them a good sized scare and his bare defeat resulted in an attempt at reform. State house affairs have lurched back into the old rut and now they think B. F. B's northeast eye is again aimed at the high seat.

The foreign immigrants arrived thus far this week number 9,200, making the total arrivals for this month 41,611, and the total since the 1st of January 146,902. The estimated arrivals this month will be fully 70,000. During the entire year of 1877 but 63,855 immigrants were landed. The figures for this month may even exceed the total figures for 1875, when 75,035 emigrants disembarked here.

Ex-Senator Dorsey, who felt so aggrieved at the malicious reports charging him with complicity in the "star" route frauds, that he wrote an open letter to Postmaster-General James requesting a full investigation in order that his good name might not be damaged by untrue statements, is probably not perfectly at ease over the turn affairs are taking.

THE NEW BIBLE.

Radical Defects in the New Version Pointed Out.

A dispatch from London gives the main points of the Standard's review of the revised Testament. The writer of the article asserts that, whatever scholars may think of the labors of the revisers, the impression produced upon the public mind is one of disappointment and dissatisfaction. He continues: "It is deeply to be regretted that the revisers, judging by the work just published, have apparently forgotten the conditions under which the task was intrusted to them. It is obvious that a great many of the alterations adopted have been approved for reasons of mere literary criticism, which make us rather skeptical as to the infallibility or even the good taste of the revisers. Where no material change in the sense or substance of the authorized version has been shown to be required by the revisers for the proper construing of the original, they have, nevertheless, thought themselves justified in mending the English and improving the grammar of passages which have struck deep root in the hearts and memory of the English people. One word has been substituted for another at the whim of the New Testament Committee. Moods and tenses have been shifted about to satisfy some pedantic scheme of syntactical symmetry; sentences treasured up in the popular mind and enriched beyond description by the pathetic associations of hundreds of years, have been tortured and crucified into precise grammatical accord with the latest refinements of critical labor, upon a comparison of the early manuscript texts, and thus have been robbed of their true value." In conclusion, the Standard writer says it remains now for the revisers to revise the text they have produced. If this new version is ever to be generally used and to supersede the authorized version, many of the alterations that have been made must be discarded.

Howe's Speech.

A Paris dispatch says that the Monetary Conference was intensely interested in a very able speech by Judge Howe, who outlined the American position on the question of bimetalism in the United States. He said: We are not here on behalf of mine owners to bull the market for silver. Agriculture is our chief interest. Our annual cotton crop is worth seven times, our wheat crop twelve times and our corn crop eighteen times the average annual product of our silver mines. America is seeking for herself and the world a broad and stable money basis upon which the $30,000,000,000 of the world's indebtedness can rest. Judge Howe predicted that this conference would free the Latin Union on equal terms or nothing. The Government of the United States offers to stand side by side with its sisters represented here in upholding the monetary functions of both gold and silver.

The handsome room of the Senate Committee on Railroads was the other day the scene of a novel exhibition. A track sixteen feet long was laid on high office stools, with gas mains, telegraph and other addenda to elevated railroads, besides four stations and a train of good sized cars. The invention, to exhibit which this display was made, was Mr. R. G. Jennings' automatic railway signal system. This consists in placing gas or electric lamps at stated intervals apart, the space between the lamps constituting a block. Connected with these lamps is a system of pipes and electric wires, operated by valves, which are moved by a trip lever attached to the locomotive. This, it is claimed, makes a complete and automatic block, and gives absolute security against accidents from collisions.

"The abolition of the unit rule, the defeat of the third-term project, the establishment of the principle of district representation at Chicago, and the reaffirmance at Washington of the constitutional right of the President to nominate to the Senate, and to have such nominations considered by the Senate, are hopeful evidences of the dawning of a brighter day in politics, when independence of thought and independence of action may be exercised within the party by any loyal member thereof without the certainty of an instant death between the wheels of the political juggernaut. When that day comes, and not till then, we shall have what you and every other good citizen has long and earnestly desired—government by the people."

The State tax for 1881 in the several Pacific States is, as follows: Nevada, 90 cents; Oregon, 70 cents; California, 65 cents.

Senator Jones calls Garfield the new Dictator before whom the Senate, in the hope of a few offices, abjectly bows.

The Jews are being horribly treated in Russia.

MONEY FOR THE MINES.

[S. F. Bulletin.]

There is a great deal of reciprocity in mining enterprises, though sometimes it is nearly all one way, and that way is not altogether agreeable to the public. The mines are demanding money with the regularity of the sun, and some of them are yielding money with great faithfulness and liberality. The number of assessment mines is always larger than the number of dividend mines, and consequently it often appears that there is more money put into mines than there is taken out of them. This can hardly be true, since a business long carried on in that way would end in bankruptcy. But if only a new dollar were obtained for the old dollar, there would be no occasion to abandon the industry. Some one has said that he who makes two blades of grass grow where there was only one before, is a benefactor of his race. It may with equal force be said that he who coins a dollar out of hidden rock at the expense of a dollar should be regarded by his fellows with corresponding esteem. He has not enriched himself by the expenditure, unless he be interested in some of the manipulations used in the production of the dollar, but he has placed two coin dollars in the world where there was only one before. During the current month, 28 assessments will become delinquent on as many mines in California, Nevada and Arizona. As usual, most of these mines are in Nevada, that being the oldest and most prolific section of mining incorporations. There are 18 mines in Nevada to be benefited by these assessments. Ten of these mines are in Storey county, three in Esmeralda county, two in Elko county, and one respectively in Nye, Lincoln and Humboldt counties. There are 8 mines in California asking for money this month. Three of these are in Mono county, and the others are in Amador, Butte, Inyo, Nevada and Placer counties. This is the smallest number of Mono county mines asking for aid in a long time. Whether they are more independent than formerly, or whether the owners have become ashamed to renew their appeals on the same scale as previously, is not altogether clear. There is this to be said of the Mono county district, as of many other districts it has not come up to expectation. Thus far but one good mine has been developed there, out of the hundreds of locations made, and the dozen or more that have become billion producers to some extent. Arizona presents two claims for aid this month. One of these is from the Peak mine in Yavapai county—a claim that has produced some bullion, and collected two assessments. The other is the San Pedro mine in Cochise county, Tombstone district, and is the first call of the kind. This also is the first assessment of the Boston Consolidated in Mono county, Consolidated Amador in Amador county, Liguria in Nye county and Lord of Lorn in Storey county.

Handmaiden of Prosperity.

[S. F. Bulletin.]

While mining first brought California into prominence before the country, and while it has been and still is an important element of prosperity, it is evident that the two factors—agriculture and manufactures—so essential to permanent growth in other sections of the United States and in other countries, must be relied upon here. Usually strictly mining sections are not considered favorable for anything else. This was the notion of the pioneers of this State, who sent to Oregon and Chile for their flour, little thinking it worth while to pay much attention to raising wheat. It is said that many of the early settlers had little faith that California would ever amount to much as a wheat State. Most of them have been permitted to live long enough to radically change their views in that respect. From an entirely dependent condition, California now ranks as the third wheat producing State of the Union, and last year took the second rank. There is no reason to doubt that in less than five years it will outrank all other States in this respect. It is not alone in wheat that the State has attained it, agriculturally, such prominence. It has for some time been the largest barley producing State in the country. In the matter of fruits, great progress has been made, both in description and volume. In probably no other State is there such a variety of fruit produced, while the quality, is many respects, superior to the same varieties elsewhere grown. California is already the grape State of America, and it has a future in this line compared with which the past pales into insignificance. There is little cause for complaint of our agricultural progress. We have the area, soil and climate, for a vast expansion, and it will come in time, when our lands become more subdivided and our population is increased.

Safety Cage

Larkin Richardson has applied for a patent for a safety-cage, recently invented by him. A working model of which has been shown us. This cage is so arranged that it can be stopped at will at anywhere from one inch to five feet in any part of the shaft by the men in the cage, and is entirely independent of the engineer in charge. It also rings a gong when at a distance of 100 feet from the surface of the shaft, so as to prevent any accident by the running of the cage into the shafts. The Colonel will go to the Comstock in a few days and exhibit his invention to mining men and miners there.

Ferguson's Body Found

Dave McFarland yesterday afternoon received a telegram from Jesse Thompson stating that the body of Ferguson had been seen in the river one mile east of Camp 24 at noon. Ben Bacon and others, at Verdi, have been cautioned to keep a strict watch.

Since the above was put in type the gratifying news has been received of the recovery of the body. The train men on No. 7 saw the body in an eddy in the river at Camp 25. They stopped the train, and got off to get the body, but before they could secure it it whirled out into the river again. The boys notified a gang of section men who were at work near by, and the section men soon recovered the body. Word was sent to Truckee for a coffin, and poor Ferguson was sent up there last night. When found the body was almost bare, the clothes having been nearly stripped off.

Seeds for Every body

Just received from the best gardens of the Eastern States and California a choice lot of fresh and pure Vegetable and Flower Seeds. Being experienced dealers and large buyers, we buy cheaper and sell our seeds twenty per cent cheaper in bulk to farmers and gardeners than any other house in Reno. Call and see for yourselves—Alfalfa, Red Clover, Timothy, Red Top, White Clover, Blue Grass, Fine Mixed Lawn seeds. A large stock as cheap as the cheapest.

CAMPAIGN OF DEATH.

A Fight With Pit River and Modoc Indians in 1867

The following is taken from the State Line Herald of a late date, and refers to the fight with these Indians, at what is now known as "Crook's Cave."

There are very few men in the army to-day who participated in the memorable action with hostile Indians at the "Infernal Caverns," Pit river, California, in the latter part of September, 1867. One, now serving in Company F, First Cavalry at Boise station, became prominently conspicuous in several brave and daring acts, in rendering assistance to his fallen comrades, that deserves more than a passing glance, and who was himself badly wounded in the final attack.

THE INDIAN STRONGHOLD

At daylight, on the morning of September 27, 1867, the Indians, numbering about 125 bucks armed with bows and arrows, shotguns and old rifles, had fortified themselves in two strong forts, situated in a bed of lava, about 200 feet above the plain. The forts had underground communications, besides which, there were numerous other caves and underground passages, leading out into the ravine about 100 yards in the rear of the line, that were unknown to the troops at that time. The troops numbering about forty two fighting men, commenced the attack at noon, September 26th, driving the Indians from small breastworks into their forts with a loss of

TWO MEN KILLED.

And several wounded. The whole afternoon was spent in desultory firing and reconnoitering the Indians' position. One man, who was mortally wounded, fell between two rocks in such a position as to be out of range, but an open space at twenty five yards range from the Indians had to be passed to get to him, and the poor fellow kept continually calling for water. Time and time again efforts were made by the man we speak of to reach his wounded comrade with a canteen of water, but every effort brought such a volley of slugs and arrows that his death would have been the inevitable result if he persisted. One of the men who was killed fell in an exposed position, about twenty five yards from the Indians, and they kept amusing themselves by

FIGHTING AT HIS LODGE.

As it lay cold in death. The red devils were well secured behind a wall of rocks with small openings to see and fire through, while they were well secured from view. Our friend made several efforts to get the body down out of range, but every effort was met by a terrible volley from the Indians. Not to be thwarted, however, he produced a lariat, and, crawling on his belly up the hill, he reached near enough to the body, and behind it, to secure the lariat around the leg and then crawled backwards out of range and drew the body down, where it was taken charge of by the surviving comrades, who had been watching the daring operation of the gallant. All night long Indians howling and firing from both sides was kept up, and at daybreak a charge was made on the fort. This had to be done by a rush down into a deep gulch and then up forty or fifty feet—nearly a perpendicular wall of boulders. The Indians were found to be

COMPLETELY ENCIRCLED

By a wall eight or ten feet high, and evidently felt secure. But the troops soon made a break and drove them pell-mell over the wall and into the various holes and caves on the other side. Our friend was shot through the wrist, his carbine broken, and he himself fell headlong to the bottom of the gulch, bruised and otherwise injured, but still hungry for more fighting. It was in this charge that the gallant Madigan (2d Lieutenant, 1st Cavalry) was killed. The loss of the troops was seven killed and eleven wounded. The Indians lost twenty killed. All day on the 27th promiscuous firing was kept up, with more or less loss to the Indians. During the night they escaped by passing through the caves underground, and coming out in the ravine about 100 yards in the rear of

THE LINE OF PICKETS

Of the troops. On the 28th one man was killed by a wounded Indian in one of the caves. He had been exploring for dead Indians and scalps, and lost his life while entering a large cave. His body had to be dragged up by means of a lariat attached to a long pole with a hook on the end of it. The Indians comprising this party consisted of about equal numbers of Modocs, Pit Rivers and Piutes, and was one of the first series of hard fights which put an end to the Pit River Indians as an organized tribe, and in the following year terminated in the surrender of the Piutes to Gen. Cook, a decade of years.

On the evening previous to his departure for Washington Territory, a number of Bill Getchell's friends presented him with a handsome gold ring, suitably inscribed.
